How much faster is your service than a DSL connection? Typically, most residential DSL offerings max out at 6 - 10 Mbps. Although download speeds are affected by the speed of the server and by the amount of traffic on the Internet at any given time, our High Speed Internet service can provide you with speeds up to 110 Mbps - that's over 10 times faster than DSL.

What about my e-mail address? You can have up to eight e-mail addresses. Additional e-mail addresses can be purchased for only $3.00 per month each. The e-mail address on our Internet service will be <your choice of names here>@HomeSC.com. Home Telecom has partnered with Google® to offer Google Apps Partner Edition, a rich collection of e-mail and web-based services.

What is a Dynamic IP? IP stands for "Internet Protocol." An IP address enables a computer to be identified on the Internet while the user is on-line. A dynamic IP address (included with our Internet packages) is one that is temporarily assigned to a user from a pool of IP addresses from a centrally administered server. It means that you have a different IP address each time you log onto the Internet.

What is a Static IP? This is an Internet Protocol address that remains the same every time a user logs onto the Internet. Because it is a "fixed" address, it is easier for other Internet users to locate and connect to the hosting computer. There is a $20 per month fee for static IP addresses.
